

ECO-TERR[®] FEATURED IN MIAMI HIGHRISE
ONE DEVELOPMENT TWO LOOKS... ECO-TERR GIVES OPTIONS

For this Miami Pied a Terre, Architect Henry Rueda was looking to evoke an urban contemporary feel. The last thing he wanted was a blue/white, beach/ocean Miami look. Instead, he chose Eco-Terr in Bergamo Black to create a space that you could find in a city like New York. Rueda was looking for a surface that would stand the test of time, as well as elicit an atmosphere of refined living. With his clients being somewhat of design junkies, Eco-Terr flooring is the perfect background for any kind of object or furniture that they will bring into the apartment. It has a great presence without an over imposing feeling.

Eco-Terr tiles are complimented by a terrazzo countertop adding a spark and depth to the space. It was also a great addition as both flooring and countertops shine with the warm halogen lights creating the perfect live/work/cook area in a small apartment like this. "Eco-Terr was a great choice. It is a quality, timeless material with easy maintenance and looks! It is a material that brings me back to my childhood in the seventies and also gives me a cold and soft feeling, very different than marble and stone, which can be too flat sometimes", said Rueda.

Rueda is such a fan of Eco-Terr that he used it several other projects. Here, "Fontana White" gives a light and sophisticated look.

Eco-Terr Slabs are as beautiful as innovative, and can be cut, shaped and mounted very easily. Both Eco-Terr tiles and slabs are extremely resilient and are available in a wide array of colors.
